Good Networks, Information and Communication

We know that Hertfordshire is a big area with many things happening for people with learning disabilities. Lots of the things are good and some could be better. Sometimes people don’t know where to find out what is happening or how to raise issues. Sometimes people can’t get involved because the communication isn’t in the right way for them.

We aim to work with Local forums, Partners, Health and Social Care colleagues, District Councils and County Councillors to improve information and communication, help people to have good networks and not disadvantage people through the type of communication used.

We will link to HCC communications team and press office to raise awareness by using the wider press and newspapers.

Better and clearer information, communication plans and networking. This will include things like:

- Information about the Learning Disability Partnership Board and a communication plan.
- Partnership Board Member information including roles and responsibilities, Partnership Board Members strengths and who they represent.

  Good links and clear information about roles and responsibilities of other boards, groups and services. Who the decision makers are and who the influencers are.

- Partnership Board Members to have good links with other areas regionally/nationally to share good practice and feedback information to the other Partnership Board Members and our wider networks.
Networking and cross cutting. This is when different areas are working on the same theme of work and could link together for better outcomes. This will be things like linking with Mental Health, Sensory and Physical Disability services and commissioners to raise awareness of the needs of people that have learning disabilities.

Information about local forums, their roles and working together better.

Mapping information about services and what to do if someone has a concern or when things go wrong and who to contact.

Carers and self advocate’s involvement and views, including those with recent transition and college experience.

Signposting information for people not eligible for services (‘Fair Access to Care’).

How information, news and consultations are communicated. This will include things like:

- Ongoing improvements to make Hertfordshire County Councils web pages more accessible for people with learning disabilities.

- Different ways of communicating including using social media and safety awareness around this, meetings, newsletters, easy read information.

- Development of guidance for easy read information standards to improve equality of communication in consultations and other information.

- Good networks for engaging with people with learning disabilities and their families for their views and ideas to help shape the right services and support.

- Awareness of all support options including things like emarket, micro enterprises and herts help to support choice and control.
- Better user friendly and easy read / accessible communication - for example when invoices and reminders are sent out.

Raising the profile of people with learning disabilities as valued citizens and to inspire other people.

- Promote achievements that people with Learning Disabilities have made. Inspire other people and encourage inclusion by changing people’s ideas about someone with a learning disability.

Preventative work. This is work that happens to prevent or slow down something from happening. This could be health and wellbeing or safety related.

- Work with partners to raise awareness of what is happening already and how to access these.

- Work with partners to raise awareness of the gaps and what is needed.

Improving Health and Lives. (IHAL)

Background information.

For some time Learning Disability Partnership Boards across the country have been checking how well services are doing to make sure that people with learning disabilities and their families can have full lives as citizens in their communities.

Two main ways they have been doing this have been through the Health Self-Assessment Framework and the Valuing People Now Partnership Board Return. Lots of people said that these should be joined together so that people were not asked the same questions twice and to make sure that health and social care can work together in the best way possible.

Nationally in 2013, the reports were joined together and were replaced with the Joint Health and Social Care Learning Disability Self Assessment Framework (JHSCSAF).

The Joint Health and Social Care Learning Disability Self Assessment Framework (JHSCSAF).

• The LDPB have an important role in reviewing and having a say in the annual self assessment ratings allocated by Health and Social Care and in the sign off of the Joint Health and Social Care LD self assessment framework.

In preparation for our role in having a say on the ratings and developing our recommendations we will be:

• Considering feedback, reports and information from various places to find out what is happening and experiences people are having.
• Developing a good understanding of what is working well and what could be better. Examples of what we will be considering are:
  o What are people’s experiences of GPs, Acute hospitals and other services/providers
  o How services/providers monitor their services o the choice and control that individuals have o the quality of support and services provided o what is happening in Hertfordshire after any relevant national enquiry has taken place for example Winterbourne View and Transforming care.
  o The Care Act and any other relevant new Acts of Parliament.

• Encourage both good and not so good stories about services to be shared so that learning and good practise can come from these.

• We will work with commissioners:-
  o Fulfil our role and have a say in the review of the annual self assessment ratings allocated by Health and Social Care and in the sign off of the Joint Health and Social Care LD self assessment framework.
  o Highlight recommendations and have a say in the monitoring of the improvement plan.
